ROBERT JACKSON,

Plaintiff,

v.

MICHIGAN DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS, et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 1:12-cv-433

Hon. Robert J. Jonker

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

This is a civil rights action brought by a state prisoner pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

This matter is now before the court on a motion for summary judgment filed by defendant Maurice Potts, M.D. (docket no. 9). Defendant's motion is unopposed.

I. Background

Plaintiff named three defendants in his complaint: the Michigan Department of Corrections ("MDOC"); Northern Region Health Care; and Dr. Maurice Potts (named in the complaint as "Unknown Potts"). The court previously summarized plaintiff's allegations as follows:

Plaintiff presently is incarcerated at the St. Louis Correctional Facility. In his pro se complaint, he sues the Michigan Department of Corrections, Northern Region Health Care and Doctor Unknown Potts for violating his Eighth Amendment rights.

Plaintiff complains that Defendants failed to adequately treat an injury to his wrist. On May 30, 2011, Plaintiff was working in the kitchen when a hot pan of oatmeal slipped from his grip. While falling, the pan caught Plaintiff's oven mitt and pulled his right hand down. Plaintiff felt something pop in his right wrist. The next morning, Plaintiff's wrist was swollen and painful. He noticed a bone sticking up under his skin. After seeing the doctor for several months, Plaintiff complains that he is not getting any better. Plaintiff filed a grievance with the warden and the Northern Region Health Care to no avail.

For relief, Plaintiff requests monetary damages and to be seen by an “outside” physician. (Compl., docket #1, Page ID#3.)

Opinion (docket no. 4).

II. Dr. Potts’ motion for summary judgment

A. Legal Standard

Plaintiff seeks relief pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, which confers a private federal right of action against any person who, acting under color of state law, deprives an individual of any right, privilege or immunity secured by the Constitution or federal laws. Burnett v. Grattan, 468 U.S. 42, 45 n. 2 (1984); Stack v. Killian, 96 F.3d 159, 161 (6th Cir.1996). To state a § 1983 claim, a plaintiff must allege two elements: (1) a deprivation of rights secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States, and (2) that the defendant deprived him of this federal right under color of law. Jones v. Duncan, 840 F.2d 359, 360-61 (6th Cir. 1988); 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

“The court shall grant summary judgment if the movant shows that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). Rule 56 further provides that “[a] party asserting that a fact cannot be or is genuinely disputed must support the assertion by”:

(A) citing to particular parts of materials in the record, including depositions, documents, electronically stored information, affidavits or declarations, stipulations (including those made for purposes of the motion only), admissions, interrogatory answers, or other materials; or

(B) showing that the materials cited do not establish the absence or presence of a genuine dispute, or that an adverse party cannot produce admissible evidence to support the fact.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1).

In Copeland v. Machulis, 57 F.3d 476 (6th Cir. 1995), the court set forth the parties' burden of proof in deciding a motion for summary judgment:

The moving party bears the initial burden of establishing an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party's case. Once the moving party has met its burden of production, the nonmoving party cannot rest on its pleadings, but must present significant probative evidence in support of the complaint to defeat the motion for summary judgment. The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence to support plaintiff's position will be insufficient; there must be evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the plaintiff.

Copeland, 57 F.3d at 478-79 (citations omitted). "In deciding a motion for summary judgment, the court views the factual evidence and draws all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party." McLean v. 988011 Ontario Ltd., 224 F.3d 797, 800 (6th Cir. 2000). However, the court is not bound to blindly adopt a non-moving party's version of the facts. "When opposing parties tell two different stories, one of which is blatantly contradicted by the record, so that no reasonable jury could believe it, a court should not adopt that version of the facts for purposes of ruling on a motion for summary judgment." Scott v. Harris, 550 U.S. 372, 380 (2007).

Here, defendants' motion is unopposed. "The fact that there has been no response to a summary judgment motion does not, of course, mean that the motion is to be granted automatically." Champion v. Artuz, 76 F.3d 483, 486 (2d Cir. 1996). However, when a motion for summary judgment is unopposed, "[n]othing in either the Rules or case law supports an argument that the trial court must conduct its own probing investigation of the record" to demonstrate the existence of genuine issues of material fact. Guarino v. Brookfield Township Trustees, 980 F.2d 399, 405 (6th Cir. 1992).

B. Failure to Exhaust

1. Exhaustion requirement

The PLRA, 42 U.S.C. § 1997e, provides that a prisoner bringing an action with respect to prison conditions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 must first exhaust available administrative remedies. See Porter v. Nussle, 534 U.S. 516 (2002); Booth v. Churner, 532 U.S. 731 (2001). A prisoner must exhaust available administrative remedies, even if the prisoner may not be able to obtain the specific type of relief he seeks in the state administrative process. See Porter, 534 U.S. at 520; Booth, 532 U.S. at 741. One reason for creating prisoner grievance procedures under the PLRA was to create an administrative record for the court.

Requiring exhaustion allows prison officials an opportunity to resolve disputes concerning the exercise of their responsibilities before being haled into court. This has the potential to reduce the number of inmate suits, and also to improve the quality of suits that are filed by producing a useful administrative record.

Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 204 (2007). In order to properly exhaust administrative remedies, prisoners must complete the administrative review process in accordance with the deadlines and other applicable procedural rules. Id. at 218; Woodford v. Ngo, 548 U.S. 81, 90-91 (2006). “Compliance with prison grievance procedures, therefore, is all that is required by the PLRA to ‘properly exhaust.’” Jones, 549 U.S. at 218.

2. MDOC grievance process

The MDOC requires prisoners to follow a three-step process to exhaust grievances. See Policy Directive 03.02.130 (effective July 9, 2007). A prisoner must first attempt to resolve a problem with the staff member within two business days of becoming aware of the grieveable issue, unless prevented by circumstances beyond his or her control. Id. at ¶ P. If the issue is not resolved, then the grievant may file a Step I grievance on the prescribed form within five business days after the grievant attempted to resolve the issue with appropriate staff. Id. at ¶¶ P and R. The Policy Directive provides the following directions for completing grievance forms:

The issues should be stated briefly but concisely. Information provided is to be limited to the facts involving the issue being grieved (i.e., who, what, when, where, why, how). Dates, times, places and names of all those involved in the issue being grieved are to be included.

Id. at ¶ R (emphasis in original). The prisoner must send the Step I grievance to the appropriate grievance coordinator. Id. at ¶ V. If the prisoner is dissatisfied with the Step I response, or does not receive a timely response, he must request the appropriate form and send it to the Step II Grievance Coordinator. Id. at ¶ BB. Finally, if a prisoner is dissatisfied with the Step II response, or does not receive a timely response, he must send a completed Step III grievance, using the appropriate form, to the Grievance and Appeals Section. Id. at ¶ FF.

3. Exhaustion as to Dr. Potts

In support of his motion for summary judgment, Dr. Potts submitted the affidavit of Richard Russell, Manager of the Grievance Section of the MDOC. See Richard Russell Aff. (docket no. 9-2 at pp. 2-5). In his affidavit, Mr. Russell states that he performed a search of the MDOC's Grievance Tracking database relevant to step III grievance appeals filed by Robert Jackson, Inmate No. 232105, which shows all Step III grievance appeals filed from April 9, 2009 through July 13, 2012. Russell Aff. at ¶¶ 17-18. This time-frame includes the relevant time period during which plaintiff would have engaged in the grievance process for his alleged injury on May 30, 2011. Mr. Russell's search revealed no records of Step III appeals being filed during that time period. See MDOC Prisoner Step III Grievance Reports (docket no. 9-2 at pp. 6-7). Based on this uncontested record, there is no evidence that plaintiff properly exhausted any grievances against defendant Dr.

Potts. Jones, 549 U.S. at 218; Woodford, 548 U.S. at 90-91. Accordingly, Dr. Potts is entitled to summary judgment.

III. Recommendation

For the reasons set forth above, I respectfully recommend that defendant Dr. Potts' unopposed motion for summary judgment (docket no. 9) be GRANTED.
